SLAYER AIDSHUNT FOR VICTIM'S HEAD, THROWN IN RIVER

Aram Tashjian Admits to the Police that He Killed Markar in His Home and Then Threw Head Off Thirty-fourth Street Pier.

DROVE CHILD AWAY WHILE HE COMPLETED HIS TASK.

Patrolman M'Gowan's Brother Gave the First Clue on Which Armenian's Arrest Was Based—Victim Disappeared After Quarrel.

After a tragic scene in the Morgue to-day when he fell over the dismembered and headless corpse of the brother he murdered, hysterically shrieking the confession of guilt which starts him for the electric chair, Aram Tashjian, a young Armenian, accompanied the detectives in a launch to the foot of West Thirty-third street and pointed out the place in the North River where he had thrown the little black valise, weighted with iron, which contained his brother Markar's missing head.

Before his confession he was a nerveless wreck, bordering on collapse. When he had freed himself of the great secret his conscience held he called for food, braced up and said he felt all right. Without a quiver he directed the police to the point where he had hurried at 5 o'clock Sunday morning and thrown his brother's head into the water.

After an hour's unsuccessful denegating in the mad bottom the police sent for two divers to go down in the six-foot of water and search through the mud bottom of the river for the ghastly prize.

The big crowd of men on shore heard that Aram had tried to jump overboard from the launch and was prevented by the detectives. Soon after divers came Tashjian was taken back to headquarters.

Never have the police listened to a more cold-blooded narrative than that told by Aram Tashjian after his breakdown in the Morgue. That first admission of guilt was hysterical and the result of a sudden and great mental shock.

Confronted with the Body.

When he was led before the slab in the Morgue on which lay the dismembered parts of the body found scattered about Thirty-sixth street and Eleventh avenue last Sunday, Tashjian, a young Armenian, gave one scream and fell forward over the corpse.

"It did it! I did it!" he cried hysterically, as the detectives lifted him to his feet. "Great God! I did it!"

In a few minutes the fratricide had made a full confession, admitting that the headless body was that of his elder brother, Markar Tashjian, that he had stabbed him to death on the heat of passion late Saturday night, had dismembered the body into eight parts and had thrown the head, the only part now missing, into the North River.

(Special to The Evening World.) GRAVESEND RACE TRACK, Sept. 27.—The declaring off of the match between Lady Amelia and Roseben, which was the fifth race on the card at Gravesend to-day left the Albemarle Handicap for mares the stake favorite, but was neglected, and went back to 1 to 1 while the smart ones were plunging on Coy Maid, and True Wings. Running Water confounded the wise people by winning in the easiest possible manner from Coy Maid, who beat Disabille a head.

Ran as Betting Indicated. Diamond opened a warm favorite in the first race, but he grew lukewarm and finally cold, and he ran just that kind of a race. He backed up all the way. Robin Hood, who does not like mud, breezed to the front and almost lapped. It was only in the last few jumps that Miller on Arkikita and Horner on Van Ness passed him, and in a hot drive Arkikita won by a neck. Van Ness was a 15 to 1 chance. He beat Robin Hood a neck.

The changed conditions of the track favored Far West in the handicap, and he made all the running and won easily. Garnish held second place for a time and then weakened, and was beaten out by Fish Hawk.

Favorite Stopped Early. Leonard Joe Hayman, a hot favorite in what was called as the sixth, went to the front at the start, and showed the way to the back stretch, followed by Bragg, Neptunus and Woolwich. On his far turn Woolwich went to the front and showed the way to the stretch, followed by Bragg and Jennie McCabe. In the run home Woolwich and Bragg drew away, and in a drive Woolwich won by a head. Bragg was two lengths in front of Neptunus.

AMERICAN LEAGUE 1 PARK, CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 27.—After Cleveland romped away with the first game by a score of 10 to 1 the New Yorkers settled down to win the second if possible and pull out with an even break for the day. If the pennant is lost they propose to die game.

Four straight defeats is a heavy blow to Griffith, and has in all probability put him out of the running. By winning the second game Cleveland would have New York tied for second place, and Lajoie's men went after it stripped for action and with blood in their eyes. In the first game a few misplays following a torrent of hits by Cleveland seemed to put the Highlanders up in the air, and thereafter it was a cakewalk for the Lads. When the second game started there were fully 15,000 people in the grounds.

First Inning.

PLAN OPEN REVOLT AGAINST MURPHY

Newly Elected Leaders "Turned Down" at Buffalo Will Carry Fight to Court and Into Tammany Hall.

Never before has a political convention been followed by such a howl as is being raised by dissatisfied Democrats in New York City against the action of Murphy at the Buffalo convention.

In at least three Manhattan districts and the borough of Queens leaders who were elected at the primaries last week and thrown out of the convention at Buffalo are organizing a revolt to disrupt the Tammany machine.

An appeal to the courts is threatened in the Seventeenth and Nineteenth districts. Ross Williams defeated Matthew Donahue in the Seventeenth, and James Ahern defeated Charles Hahn in the Nineteenth, but the defeated leaders were given seats in the Buffalo convention and the elected leaders turned out.

In the Thirtieth District, Percy Nagle claimed the election over Cowan, the Murphy leader, but there was a contest and the Cowan delegates were seated. In Queens Borough President Bernal was elected by over 5,000 majority over former Borough President Cassidy, yet Cassidy was seated in the convention.

This is the first time where such high-handed methods have been followed in gaining control of a convention, and all the injured leaders claim that they will be righted by the courts.

On the other hand, Murphy men are already at work trying to make compromises that will meet the approval of the warring factions.

It is stated positively by men who are believed to know what is intended in Fourteenth street that Murphy will return from Buffalo to-night with a proposal to give the deposed leaders-elect seats in the Executive Committee, thus dividing the districts and placating the dissatisfied. The friends of the leaders-elect say that no such compromise will be accepted, and they are making vigorous preparations for war.

WHAT DEMOCRATS HAVE TO SAY OF THE CANDIDATES

BUFFALO, Sept. 27.—The delegates and others who attended the Democratic Convention are leaving for their homes. They are far from unanimous in their views of the rival candidates. The "party-savers" of the Albany conference are not ready to announce their plans.

They were to hold a session here to-day, but decided not to. District Attorney Jerome said they would meet soon at the call of the chairman, Edward M. Shepard, but beyond this he would say nothing as to the situation. Mayor McClellan left for home this afternoon. Before leaving he was asked for a statement, and said:

"The Democratic State convention has nominated a ticket. I am a Democrat, and of course I accept its action."

Thomas M. Osborne, former Mayor of Auburn, and one of the organizers of the Albany conference, said he had nothing to add to his speech in the convention, a bitter attack on Hearst and the "bombers" who he declared were aiding him.

Congressman William Sulzer, before leaving for New York City to-day said: "I am now, and always have been a Democrat, and it goes without saying that I shall support the ticket."

Edward M. Shepard said he believed that, in spite of the nomination of Hearst, the Democratic party "would still survive." He quizzed moderation, and said he believed matters should be adjusted within the party lines.

Many Democrats wearing delegates' badges declared their preference for Mr. Hughes. Senator Wagner, of Brooklyn, walked up to District Attorney Jerome and said: "I came here a Democrat, but I am going a Republican."

Sixty or ten delegates surrounded him and they declared vigorously "Me too." Some of these were Rockland County men. John A. Hennrich, Chief Clerk of the District Attorney's Office in New York, said: "Every Republican and half the Democrats will vote for Mr. Hughes. No one need look for names. All any one has to do to find out who Mr. Hughes's supporters will be is to look in the directories and telephone books."

Democrat on Hughes. Judge T. C. O'Sullivan, of the Supreme Court, who is a Tammany delegate, said: "Mr. Hughes is a very strong man and he will make a strong run. He is an excellent lawyer and a clean candidate."

Judge George W. Reeves, of Watertown, said: "It is surprising that the Republican party has shown so much sense in nominating a man for whom decent Democrats can vote. I have no hesitation in saying I will vote for Mr. Hughes."

Mr. Hughes's nomination has nullified the strong planks in our platform. George S. Vankennon, of Ogden.

LATTER'S FRIENDS HIT

Police Descend on Places Alleged to Be Run By "Big Fellow's" Supporters.

AFTER GALLAGHER, TOO

Raids Made Over Head of Precinct Commander, Who Has Had Sullivan Backing.

The raid went down with a crash this afternoon when the Street Cleaning Squad, under Sergt. Bob McNeough, swooped down and raided a place at No. 1915 Third avenue, over the head of Capt. Edward Gallagher of the East One Hundred and Fourth Street Station, a suspected Sullivan adherent. Within three days, it was predicted to-day at Headquarters, the town would be as tight as a clam-shell. The first raid was followed by a second at No. 1890 Third avenue.

The tip had gone out to close up places to be raided, and following the Sullivan defection at Buffalo, it is alleged, the machinery has been started to clamp down the cover on all places where have hitherto remained unscathed through the alleged friendly relations with the Big Fellow. Before the week ends New York will be tight and as, according to the best authorities.

The dash into the One Hundred and Fourth street precinct was made in a wagon from the East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth street station, with the assistance of six men from the staff. Inspector E. O. Smith, who was on duty at the precinct, was on the scene, and was being crowded out of the department by Mayor McClellan's personal aid.

The raid so patently over the head of Capt. Gallagher was a direct warning of the things to come, as Gallagher under the patronage of the Sullivan has worked up until he was in line as an inspector.

McNeough, then hurried to No. 1915 Third avenue, where he found the place held up by Detective Murray and Platen, of the Street-Cleaning Squad. From the mass they selected Harry Lewis, of No. 22 West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, and arrested him as the proprietor of the pool-room and gambling house. With him were arrested Louis Franklin, William Bates, Mike Fitzgerald, Charles Brown, A. L. Levy and Joe Fox, who were taken as employees.

In addition to the racing results, pasternals there were stunts and raffles in the place, which were being run by the officers.

Capt. Gallagher's wardman was in the place hanging disconsolately around the door, when an Evening World reporter arrived on the scene. When the reporter was leaving, after securing the news, the wardman hailed him with:

"Put the Captain in this, won't you?" On being told Capt. Gallagher's figure in the raid he said threateningly: "All right, we'll let you out after this. Meaning that efforts would be made to keep him from news at the station."

In connection with the raid of No. 1915 Third avenue it is alleged a common police gossip that a police official controls the poolroom.

When the poolrooms' patrons to-day tried to enter their favorite gaming parlors they were barred and told "Not in doing." Last night in several gaming houses the patrons were told that the tin had gone out to close and that it would be opened. On this upper west side the poolroom men have been kept on the move all week, just keeping their heads above water in the East One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street station.

Three of the six men arrested were held in $1,000 each. Since then there have been rumors that Sweeney was to be put on charges similar to those against Schmittberg, and as a result the inspectors have been keeping the poolrooms moving.

It was rumored that Inspector Kiesel O'Smith was to be sent back to Hart Island, where he was for years before the attempt was made to retire him on disability.

With the Tenderloin, the lower end of the island and Harlem closing down the poolrooms men and gamblers admit freely that their time is short.
